GOVERNMENT ATTACKED FOR WEAKNESS IN FAR EAST DISPUTE

TRIBUTE PAID TO WAR DEAD AT CENOTAPH

Army And Navy Units
Join In Ceremony.
GUN CALLS FOR SILENCE.

The recollection of the four years of torturing war, the memories of those who fell on Flanders fields, was poignantly recalled at the Armistice Day ceremony held at the Cenotaph at 11 o'clock this morning. Although fourteen years have passed since the day when the guns were silenced, there was not one of the vast crowd who was not deeply stirred at the sight of the long ranks of the men in khaki, the sailors in white, the glint of medals, as the combined forces of Hong Kong assembled to pay tribute to fallen comrades.

But far the most touching and inspiring moment came when, with the boom of the gun, a breathless hush fell over the gathering. The "Two Minute Silence" was followed by the clear, ringing notes of a bugle, sounding "Reveille," the last salute to the forgotten dead.

The ceremony to-day commenced at 10.45, a vast crowd gathering around the Monument shortly before 9.30. The scene was a colourful one, the mingling of the Service uniforms, the red, purple, and black robes and the white surplices of the Bishops, Clergy and Choir, the glitter of the dress of the officers and men of the assembled units, the morning suits of the members of the Executive and Legislative Councils. There was the vivid crimson of poppies, seen in every buttonhole or cap.

His Excellency, the Officer Administering the Government, the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G., arrived at 10.55 a.m., being escorted from Government House by members of the Motor Cycle Section of the H.K.V.D.C. His Excellency the O.A.G. was preceded by H.E. Admiral Sir W. A. H. Kelly, K.C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., and representative officers of the military units.

At 10.59 a.m. the buglers of the Lincolnshire Regiment and the South Wales Borderers sounded the "Last Post." Scarcely had the clear notes of the bugles died away when the signal gun fired. The "Two Minute Silence" boomed out from Murray Parade Ground. Quiet fell upon the crowd, as bareheaded, it paid homage to those who gave their lives in the Great War.

The "Reveille" was then sounded by the buglers, and as the band of the South Wales Borderers struck up the hymn, "O God Our Help in Ages Past," the throng joined in and sang. The hymn was followed by prayers and the Blessing by the Clergy, followed by "God Save the King."

At the conclusion, a wreath was laid on the Cenotaph by H.E. the O.A.G., the Commander-in-Chief, the Officer Commanding the Troops, the Senior Air Force Officer, a representative of the Merchant Navy, a representative of the Chinese community, representatives of the foreign naval vessels at present in port, representatives of His Majesty's Forces in the Colony, the British Legion, the Old Comrades' Association and civilian bodies.

Numerous other floral tributes were then laid by individuals. Three-Sided Square. The deposition of the troops attending the Cenotaph Service this morning was as follows:—

One Company, the Band and Drums of the 1st Battalion, the South Wales Borderers, were drawn up, facing the Supreme Court, forming the first three sides of a square. Just opposite them were

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE AT CATHEDRAL

Memorial Sermon By Dean Of Hong Kong.

DISTINGUISHED CONGREGATION.

A Memorial Service, at which His Excellency the Governor Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G., and Mrs. Southern attended, as well as representatives of the Consular Body, the Girl Guides and Boy Scouts, was held in St. John's Cathedral at 9.30 a.m. this morning. The Dean of Hong Kong, Very Rev. A. Swann, conducted the service and preached the sermon.

Those present in the congregation were the Rt. Rev. B. C. Roberts, Bishop of Singapore, Sir Henry Pollock, Major H. B. L. Dowbiggin, O.B.E., Mr. P. S. Cassidy, and others. Clergy assisting the Dean in the service were the Revs. N. V. Halward, M.C., W. Walton Rogers, J. N. Lewis Bryan, S.C.F., C.E., E. G. Powell, E. C. H. Tribbeck, Dr. E. L. Allen, and H. F. Foley, R.N.

At the conclusion of the service the official version of the National Anthem was sung, after which the Clergy and Choir proceeded by way of the west door to the Cathedral Memorial Cross, where a wreath was laid on behalf of the Cathedral Body, by Dr. G. A. C. Herklotz.

Taking as his text, "Seek peace, and pursue it," the Dean said in part:—

"In the fourteen years since the first Armistice Day the observance of it has passed through various stages. The first Armistice Day was frankly an occasion of tremendous relief. The world's worst ordeal was over at last, and the

Burma's Close Election

Separationist Movement
Is Main Issue.

Rangoon, To-day.
The principal issue of the general election of the Burma Legislature has been whether Burma should endorse the scheme outlined by Premier MacDonald for meeting Burma at a round table conference in January to provide for separation from India.

Out of 80 seats to be filled Separationists and anti-Separationists up to now each have 16. Six others elected are neutral. The remainder of the results are coming in slowly.—Reuter.

In the teeth of Anglo-American opposition, the plenary meeting of the Radio Telegraph conference resolved to adopt the five-letter code instead of the existing ten-letter code.—Reuter.

BRITAIN SUPPORTS GERMANY

NEW PEACE TREATY URGED ON WORLD

LONDON, TO-DAY.

SIR JOHN SIMON OUTLINED GREAT BRITAIN'S NEW POLICY ON ARMAMENTS YESTERDAY, AND THE GOVERNMENT COMMITTED ITSELF TO THE SUPPORT OF GERMANY'S PLEA FOR EQUALITY AMONG THE POWERS IN RESPECT TO ARMS.

Sir John introduced a motion which suggested that the old articles of the Treaty of Versailles should be superseded by a new treaty among the nations.

The motion was approved by a vote of 402 to 44.

In the course of the debate on the matter of Britain's armament policy, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin admitted that he anticipated another great war.

Mr. Baldwin spoke exclusively on air disarmament and urged the world to consider whether civil aviation could be so controlled as to make the abolition of all Air Forces feasible. Mr. Baldwin, who is 65, thought he had not seen the last great war, though he thought another would not come just yet.

Mr. Baldwin.

The nations of the world with Air Forces and air sense should ponder the matter, for civil machines were potential bombers. Disarmament hung on the air and as long as air forces existed the world was not yet rid of that fear which was the parent of so many troubles.

In the course of the House of Commons debate yesterday, Sir John Simon on behalf of Great Britain conceded Germany's claim to equality in armaments and the supersession of the Articles of Part Five of the Versailles Treaty by a general convention limiting Germany's armaments and similarly those of other powers.

The British note on War Debts was handed to Mr. Henry L. Stimson, U.S. Minister yesterday but no details are available. The war debts and armaments are matters to be considered one with the other, Sir John believes.—Reuter.

NO SIBERIAN MAILED IN HARBIN.

Owing to the mutiny of General Su Ping-wen at Manchull, Harbin has been without Siberian mails for sixty-two days. It is not known where the mails have been detained.

MISSION SHIP WRECKED UPON ISLAND REEFS

Ill-Fated Ship Only Recently Launched.

STRUGGLE WITH STORM.

Suva, To-day.

The trim little vessel which carried the hopes of debut men and women into the southern seas, its mission the spreading of the Gospel of Christ among the natives, has been wrecked. After a stern battle with storms, the mission ship was driven upon the coral reefs beyond the anchorage of the Island of Aneityum, in the New Hebrides group.

It was christened the Southern Cross VI, and was fitted out in Britain at great cost, with funds contributed by the congregations of churches throughout the land. It was blessed and sent upon its adventure, with four European deck officers and three European engineers and a crew of 15 Solomon Islanders. What mission workers may have been aboard at the time of the accident, it is not yet known.

The ship, necessarily had to sail into most dangerous waters, had to pick her way among the islands where charts are none too dependable. It was while she was in the vicinity of Aneityum that she ran into a fierce gale.

Desperately she fought against it, but remorselessly she was driven upon the reefs. She was held there cruelly, and the waves pounded her.

It is not likely that the crew are in any great danger.—Reuter.

CARE IN CHOICE OF MINISTER TO CHINA DESIRED

Mander Suggests Lord
Irwin For Post.

LARGE RESPONSIBILITY

London, To-day.

Mr. Geoffrey Le M. Mander, (Liberal) told the House of Commons yesterday that he hoped when Sir Miles Lampson (Minister to China), retired the Government would appoint someone of the same outstanding personality and merits, someone of the type of Lord Irwin, or Viscount D'Abernon. Mr. Mander also proposed moving the British Legation to Nanking or Shanghai.

Sir Miles recently intimated his desire to leave his post in China.

There has been a strong move in England to arrange for the moving of the Peking Legation.—Reuter.

Boncour Appeals For American Support For Security Proposal

Geneva.
An insistent appeal for American support for organization of international security under the auspices of the League of Nations was voiced by Joseph Paul Boncour, French minister of war, outlining the new French arms plan before the steering committee of the world disarmament conference. He said the fundamentals of the drastic arms reduction proposal advanced last June by President Hoover were included in the French plan, which he said amplified and perfected the Hoover principles according to French policies.

Boncour spoke for the proposal included in the plan calling for consultation of all powers when war threatens, for a European security agreement and for re-establishment of the European military conscription system on an equal basis for all nations. The minister promised a reduction of armaments on condition that the security plan was realized but refrained from indicating the extent or character of the reductions contemplated.

Under the French plan, he said, all the powers would consult in case of a threat of war, as proposed by American Secretary of State Stimson under the Kellogg-Briand peace pact. Boncour said that in this arrangement the United States would be expected to abandon the advantages given by neutrality.

Details of the French programme as presented by the war minister were the same as made public last week at Paris.

Hugh Wilson, minister to Switzerland, represented the United States at the session. Premier Herriot is scheduled to present the French programme in writing and detail next week.

British Note To Washington

Reception Not Confirmed
But Not Denied.

BORAH'S STATEMENT.

Washington, To-day.

No official confirmation is obtainable of the report of a British note on war debts being handed to Mr. H. L. Stimson, Secretary of State, but the British embassy's silence is regarded as tantamount to an admission.

Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, by which any agreement submitted to Congress must be approved, stated that the programme of mere cancellation of war debts was impossible and would not relieve Europe or help America's economic conditions, but if a programme were presented which restored the world markets and abolished the devastating burden of armaments, and normalised monetary systems, the situation would be different. He believes Mr. Stimson is preparing a statement in connection with the British note.

President Hoover would arrive in Washington in a few days. Mr. Hoover had repeatedly declared that America must not demand payments beyond the capacity of her debtors.

Meanwhile, the Treasury states that a payment of $344,000 on the war debt is due on November 10 from Greece and has not been received. Hungary has notified America that she has no foreign exchange to pay the sum due on December 15.—Reuter.

QUOTA FOR P.I. CHINESE.

Washington.
Paul Lineberger, publicist, lawyer and student of Far Eastern affairs, in his capacity as agent of the Kuomintang party of China, told the United Press he will ask congress to amend pending Philippines independence legislation to safeguard the interests of Chinese in the Philippines.

He would have the independence bill prohibit any discrimination against the Chinese, and would provide that there always should be a reasonable quota for Chinese immigrants.

The Chinese, he said, control 80 per cent of the wealth of the islands, which is justification enough for insisting on guarantees in the bill.—U. P.

The weather report for to-day: The typhoon is situated about 100 miles north east of Manila moving north-west.

Forecast:—N.E. winds, moderate to fresh, fair.

LABOUR CALLS FOR DEFINITE CHINA POLICY

Simon Declines To Make Promise.

MUST HEAR JAPAN.

The Government has been bitterly attacked for its weakness in policy in the Manchuria dispute, Labour members demanding some definite stand by the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon. He, however, declined to commit the Government until the League of Nations had considered the Lytton Report. The Japanese observations must be heard and considered, Sir Austen Chamberlain pointed out during the debate.

London, To-day.

Mr. C. R. Attlee, former Minister of the Labour Cabinet, belaboured the Government for its alleged weakness in the Sino-Japanese dispute, during the House of Commons debate on the Labourite's resolution urging the Government, firstly, to support an immediate, universal and substantial reduction of armaments on the basis of an equality of status of all nations; secondly, to maintain the principles of the League Covenant by supporting the findings of the Lytton Commission. The mover, Mr. Attlee, said the country was gravely disappointed by the lack of progress at the Disarmament Conference, saying Labour linked the disarmament and Manchurian questions because it believed Manchuria was the acid test of the League as a guarantee against attack.

Mr. Attlee added that unless the Manchurian question was satisfactorily settled, the League would lose its moral authority and the world would revert to the old system of individual armaments and sectional alliances.

After paying a tribute to the services rendered to the world by the Lytton Commission, he said he believed Japan's occupation of Manchuria was merely a militarist "try on." If Britain had given a bold lead to the League he believed the "try on" would fizzle out and the Japanese masses would not support the movement. The Lytton Report gave a great opportunity to vindicate the League's authority and the Labour party wanted to

Manchukuo Notable Here

Bride Is Sister Of Henry Pu-Yi.

TRAVELLING TO EUROPE.

Mr. Cheng Kwei-hoi, the youthful grandson of Mr. Cheng Haw-shue, the Premier of Manchukuo, together with his charming bride, the sister of Mr. Henry Pu-yi, ex-Emperor of China, and now President of the puppet state of Manchukuo, arrived in Hong Kong yesterday on the m.s. Terukuni Maru, en route to Europe for their honeymoon and to study.

They are travelling "quietly" and are a handsome couple. They smilingly refused to be interviewed on their arrival here yesterday, and did not leave the ship throughout the day.

When they reach England, they will spend some time studying before they return to Manchukuo, where Mr. Cheng will later take up a responsible position.

REPRESSION MASKS THE FEELINGS.

Sacrifices To "Good Form" Trying.

PITY THE POOR LOVER!

(By Milady).

Even in these frank, go-as-you-please days, you must never show your real feelings. If you do you'll be voted "bad form."

You may actually dislike a person, but you must hide your aversion. You may be bored to tears with certain people, but they mustn't see it. Your heart may be breaking with grief, but no one must know it. You may have deep religious convictions—keep them to yourself. You are immensely proud child or your husband—for "good form's" sake conceal it.

Never dare to break Society's unwritten law: "Hide what you really feel."

The higher our lives in civilisation, the stricter the code. Go back to Nature, and you will see animals registering grief and pain, love and happiness. Observe the lowest types of humanity and you will find a similar freedom. But this freedom decreases as education increases.

Why? How did the convention arise?

I think the answer lies in the fact that man becomes more sensitive as he evolves, and to prevent his more developed feelings from being continually wounded he has assumed the protective shield of mute indifference.

The mask has become so much a part of some people's make-up that they are unable to cast it off even when they want to.

A man loves a girl madly, but is afraid to show the depth of his feelings—they have been portrayed too often in detail on the films. And the girl, owing to the same repressions, is incapable of revealing her own love. But she sighs for the passionate cave-man of her dreams.

A pity! But there is another side to the picture.

If you are in great fear, grief, or pain, sometimes the only thing that prevents a breakdown is this habit of self control. The training instilled at school—of never letting other children know how much they can hurt you—holds good here. And so, when there seems to be nothing else to hang on to, you

CHRISTMAS BUYING NEAR AT HAND.

Shops Have Stocks
All Ready.

(By A Housewife).

It is a deplorable fact that many of us live too much in the future, and thereby lose a good deal of happiness that the present offers. We in Hong Kong are perhaps forced into that attitude of mind more than most people, largely because we are forced to make plans so far ahead. How many people at Home, for instance, are yet bothering their heads about Christmas? There will be hundreds of women who will not even start to make their Christmas puddings until December 20 or later.

It is a pity for us to get our minds that way while there is yet at least a month of glorious autumn weather before us, and still several weeks before we need even think of the central heating, but home-ties demand that we should already begin to think of presents for home and Post Office visits.

The shops have had our needs in mind for some time, and have anticipated our difficulties with regard to packing and postage. Small but exquisite articles are everywhere, and all one has to do is to make the personal choice.

WIDE RANGE OF COLOURS.

A wide range of colours strikes you at once in this collection of very studied models, made for the most part with the idea of one dress serving several purposes. A dozen greens are used.

Eucalyptus is favoured. Nigger brown and beige are one combination, grey and red are another, while chestnut brown and red are still another that is seen frequently as the models pass through the salons. Black for daytime, white and red, both separately and in combination for the evening, have been sponsored by this house, and plum trimmed in tango furnishes another gay alliance. Nigger and apricot blend well in a few models, admirable for their wealth of character and fine details, simple but effective.

This is the only instance I can think of where man has evolved a law contrary to Nature, and successfully used it as a weapon of defence against her!

Menu Suggestions For To-morrow

Tiffin.
Cod Cutlets Sliced Lemon
Pilgrim Pie Carrot Fritters
Steamed Butter Sponge
Orange Sauce
Dinner.
Chicken Consomme
Cheese In Ramekin, Horseradish
Sauce
Jugged Peas
Baked Lemon Pudding
Horseradish, usually considered indispensable to the Roast Beef of Old England, can also be pickled, and a good horseradish sauce, properly made, is a unique and delicious preparation. It is probably more digestible than scraped. Choose a young and tender root in preference to an old one, scrub it thoroughly, remove all the ends. Either scrape it into minute shavings using a sharp knife, or grate it; the latter is preferable where sauce is concerned. If the process is carried on in a strong draught the eyes will be less affected.

Pilgrim Pies.
Pie crust, 2 cups cold minced lamb, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 1 tablespoon Worcester sauce, 2/3 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup gravy, mashed potatoes. Cover inverted muffin pans (or one large deep pie plate) with the crust, pick well and bake in a moderate oven 350 to 375 degrees F. for about 15 minutes. Add the meat and seasoning to the gravy, heat, and fill the baked crust. Pile mashed potato on top, return to the oven to brown the potato delicately.

Jugged Peas.
This is one of the best ways to cook peas whether fresh, dried green, tinned or bottled. Shell a pint of peas, put them into a clean two-pound pickle bottle or any jar with a closely fitting top, adding a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, a saltspoonful of salt, a dozen mint leaves, and at discretion, a very little black pepper. Cover the vessel tightly, and immerse it to the extent of half its depth, in a pan of boiling water. Set the latter on the fire and boil briskly.

Examine in half an hour. The peas, if very young, should be done by then; if old they will of course take longer.

Baked Lemon Pudding.
Yolks of 5 eggs, 2 oz of sugar, 1 large lemon, 3/4 lb butter. Some puff pastry. Cream the butter; add the sugar and the eggs one by one. Then mix in the grated rind of the lemon and strained juice. Line a small pie dish with pastry and pour in the mixture; bake half an hour.

ROWS OF RIBBON.

Ribbon seems to be making a big bid for popularity. At a modish parade the other day, founced skirts of corded ribbon were allied to bodices of net the prettiest styles showing the colours gently shaded, not from pale to dark shades, but from one tint to another—as orange to tomato, pale pink to cyclamen, blue to white, and silver to blue.

Ribbon in bebe widths are converted into removable sleeves, and on capes are many ribbon trimmings.

Purple is, admittedly, the colour this autumn, even in the ballroom. A lily of purple moire ribbon, a belt with silver links at frequent intervals is another. Floppy muffs of ribbon may match the frock in colour though not in material.

VELVET DRESSES HAVE TRAINS.

Long, Tight Sleeves
Are Fashionable.

Molyneux has some velvet dresses with tight, long sleeves, which have trains. Jacket ensembles show the jacket short and close fitting. Max makes these of plain material and puts with them a figured tweed loose coat. Chanel makes the redingote. The three-quarter full coat with a shoulder yoke and a flared sack hem makes a comfortable overcoat. Cotton velvet, ribbed and plain, is common for the morning and afternoon. Loose or close woollens with slightly roughened surfaces are used separately or together. Fur is used lavishly. Feathers and fringe trim evening dresses and little wraps. Broadcloth has taken the place of angle cloth in the evening. The most fashionable colours are rust and dark rich wine-red. In Paris black with white or a bright colour is the fashion.

HATS OF MANY FABRICS.

To some women the new, tailored hats are vastly becoming, and they are making their selection from styles in chemille and velour. Mostly, these hats are blocks with shallow, square-shaped crowns. The brim may be underlined with a colour, and perhaps it is stitched with threads of the lining colour. But apart from these heavy materials, silks and jersey clothes are still used if they correspond to the new frock, being as well seamed, stitched and shaped as the frock itself. A lovely shade of gold jersey cloth was used in this way, the frock being trimmed with a vestlet of coral-coloured silk which also lined the brim of the hat.

CHEVALIER EXCELS IN
"LOVE ME TO-NIGHT"

"CAUGHT PLASTERED" HAS WEALTH OF HILARITY.

Ian Hay Thriller Due At King's Theatre.

Director Rouben Mamoulian has introduced a symphony of noises into the latest Chevalier-Macdonald release—"Love Me To-night." The picture opens on a silent Paris street. The first sound is the bang of a clock, a street worker comes into view and hammers on a cobblestone. Camera travels to tramp asleep in a barrel, his snores trade rhythmic beats with the other sounds. Janitor sweeps street, windows open, rugs are beaten, horse hoofs pound, taxi driver trots a musical horn, in a window a girl starts a phonograph, which picks up the other notes, and little by little the orchestral background is added.

The picture swings to the famous straw hat hanging on the wall of a humble little room—Ah!—then Maurice himself (his name, by the bye, in the play) and he gives us his first number "The Song of Paece." Ten musical numbers in which more than two score actors take part comprise the novel music, which is from the pens of Lorenz Hart and Richard Rodgers. It is interesting to note that these men have written tunes for twenty-five plays on Broadway in five years. They have perfected the art of playing story scenes in music, worlds apart from the old-fashioned musical comedy style.

Special Songs.

Each song is written for a certain part of the story, and a certain character to introduce. Chevalier sings in seven numbers, three of which are solos. Jeanette (also her name in the play) sings in five with but one solo. Dozens of minor characters sing in chorus, even Myrna Loy, and Aubrey Smith contribute their little verses. Chief among the ensemble numbers we have "Isn't it Romantic," which is taken up and sung in different tempos by chorus's carrying it along till it reaches the heroine many miles away. All join in "The Son of a Gun is Nothing but a Tailor"—and the duet between the two stars is charming—"Love Me To-night."

We find a new Maurice—to me. He seems saddened, and gives us too little of the sly humour and twinkling eyes. He is dramatic—he portrays emotional scenes and excels in the romantic one. Also, we miss the comedy of Jeanette but she gives us her lovely voice and how beautiful she is. Charles Butterworth is funnier than Ruggles, he has a little more chance, that is all. Why only criticism for this film is the lack of humour. Maurice always captures me, but "Love Parade" still stands supreme, because it gave us everything.

The Story.

Story? A lowly tailor loves a Princess, and you will witness the fair heroine astride galloping on a horse actually chasing a train which carries Prince Charming back to his small tailor shop. It all ends as we would want. The acting all round is grand—there are those who wonder why we rave over Maurice, then they can go to see lovely Jeanette. The naughtiest of the dialogue were "cut" long before they reached these shores, still lines we do hear some suggestive ones from Myrna Loy—(Countess Valentine) Butterworth and Ruggles. I hear this film has broken all records in Shanghai. A venia the hidden mysteries, comedies and romances in a London Hotel. Then—the Marx Brothers in "Horse Feathers." All due shortly at the King's.

"Happy Ending."

Young Jackie Cooper's first real chance after "Skippy" was in "Donovan's Kid," with Richard Dix, they are both splendid in it so I hear. "Transgression" a worn-out story compensated by Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez and Paul Cavanagh. In "Cracked Nuts"—we have Wheeler, Woolsey, Edna May Oliver and Dorothy Lee. You will laugh at this. Then "Happy Ending" with George Barraud (remembered in "Last of Mrs. Cheyne") Anne Grey and Benita Hume. Millard Webb the American director has made a thriller of Ian Hay's play. All these due at the Queen's Theatre.

"Caught Plastered."

Wheeler and Woolsey know their jokes and they know their public. In "Caught Plastered" they step right merrily along on the Broadway of hokum, and this film ranks high above its more high-brow competitors. This is followed by "Traveling Husbands," with Constance Cummings, Evelyn Brent and Frank Albertson. This picture is loaded with action, spiced with humour, tears and gun-play. It is so good that you can forgive certain exaggerations. Recommended!

Followed by "The Doomed Battalion," which is highly praised by critics. Then the biggest money-maker yet turned out by Britain, Jack Buchanan in "Good-night Vienna"—a musical play that will be a great hit. All due at the Central.

HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP.

Notes From Here And There.

Now that we are having Radio films here, we shall have the highest paid mannequin in New York, now a star, whom they claim is a mixture of Garbo, Dietrich and Crawford. Gwili Andre (pronounced Jee-lee Ondray) with Richard Dix, in "Roar of the Dragon."

We have not had any pictures here yet of Heather Angel, the British film star who has been reported as signing to Fox. She was out here playing the second parts with Fortes Russell Co. many years ago. Is now only in her early twenties, but has had a fair amount of stage and screen experience. Was born at Oxford where her father is a Don at Christ College. This is her right name.

"Deadlock."

Why did John Tring refuse to speak? Was he shielding someone?—See "Deadlock" with Stewart Rome, Warwick Ward, Marjorie Hume, Annette Benson and others in mystery story which nearly all takes place in a Talkie studio. (King's).

"Sunshine Susie."

Renate Muller enacts her original part from the stage version in "Sunshine Susie," British film wherein the silly, simple musical numbers are quite agreeable. Jack Hulbert best in it. Owen Nares, just himself. Good direction by Victor Savile. This is the third showing at the King's which speaks well for the film. (King's).

"Night World."

In "Night World" we have a jumble of gangsters, chorus girls, Broadway, negro doormen philosophers, and night club life. Mae Clark is appealing. Lew Ayres not so good as usual. Boris Karloff stealing acting honours. George Raft (now almost famous) good in small "Bit." Breathlessly tense is the final scene which carries most of the drama and almost makes this a really good film. Still, it is interesting. (Central).

Star Features.

Quite fair entertainment in the British film—"Ghost Train." Jack Hulbert again taking honours. Then a story to be seen again, with magnificent acting from Lionel Barrymore, Kay Francis, and cast of Madge Evans, William Bakewell and Alan Mowbray. "Guilty Hands" is god melodrama. Then one day of the All-varlet programme, followed by the masterpiece which won all honours—and is outstanding. George Arliss in "Disraeli." All coming to the Star.

Due At King's.

Kate Wiggles' famous novel made into Mary Pickford's unforgettable story, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" with Marian Nixon, Ralph Bellamy, and Mae Marsh making this sugary sweet polly-anna play—just delightful. Followed by Paramount British film "Life Goes On" Hugh Wakefield, Betty Stockfield and Elsie Randolph. This story re-

Divorce Talk Although Still With Husband.

Los Angeles.

The separation and probable divorce of Miss Vivian Duncan and her husband, Nils Asther, is announced by their lawyers.

One of the lawyers said:

"She loves to go to places and do things, while he is just the opposite, almost a recluse. Their temperaments just don't fit, but they are still living together until the question of property settlement and other matters are straightened out."—Reuter.

Miss Vivian Duncan, one of the Duncan Sisters, who made their debut while still schoolgirls in 1918, married the Swedish film star in July 1930. The Duncan Sisters appeared on the stage in London, and took part in broadcasting while here.

Greta Nissen And Weldon Heyburn.

Miss Greta Nissen, the Norwegian film star, and her film actor husband, Mr. Weldon Heyburn, have decided to part.

They have announced their separation after slightly less than six months of married life.

Miss Nissen said:

"We have tried for six months to make a go of it, but we found we could not agree. You can't get along without agreeing on things."

Miss Nissen adds that she will seek a divorce soon.

Miss Nissen and Mr. Heyburn made a flying visit to Tijuana at the end of last March and were married by a Mexican magistrate. Miss Nissen was born at Oslo, Norway, and was on the stage before she began her film career in 1925.

She had important parts in "Hell's Angels," "Fazio," "Blonde and Brunette" and "Lucky Lady."

Some wit at Paramount remarked that Fredric March was being lionized in the Cecil B. De Mille plays, "The Sign of the Cross," in the film March is killed by lions.

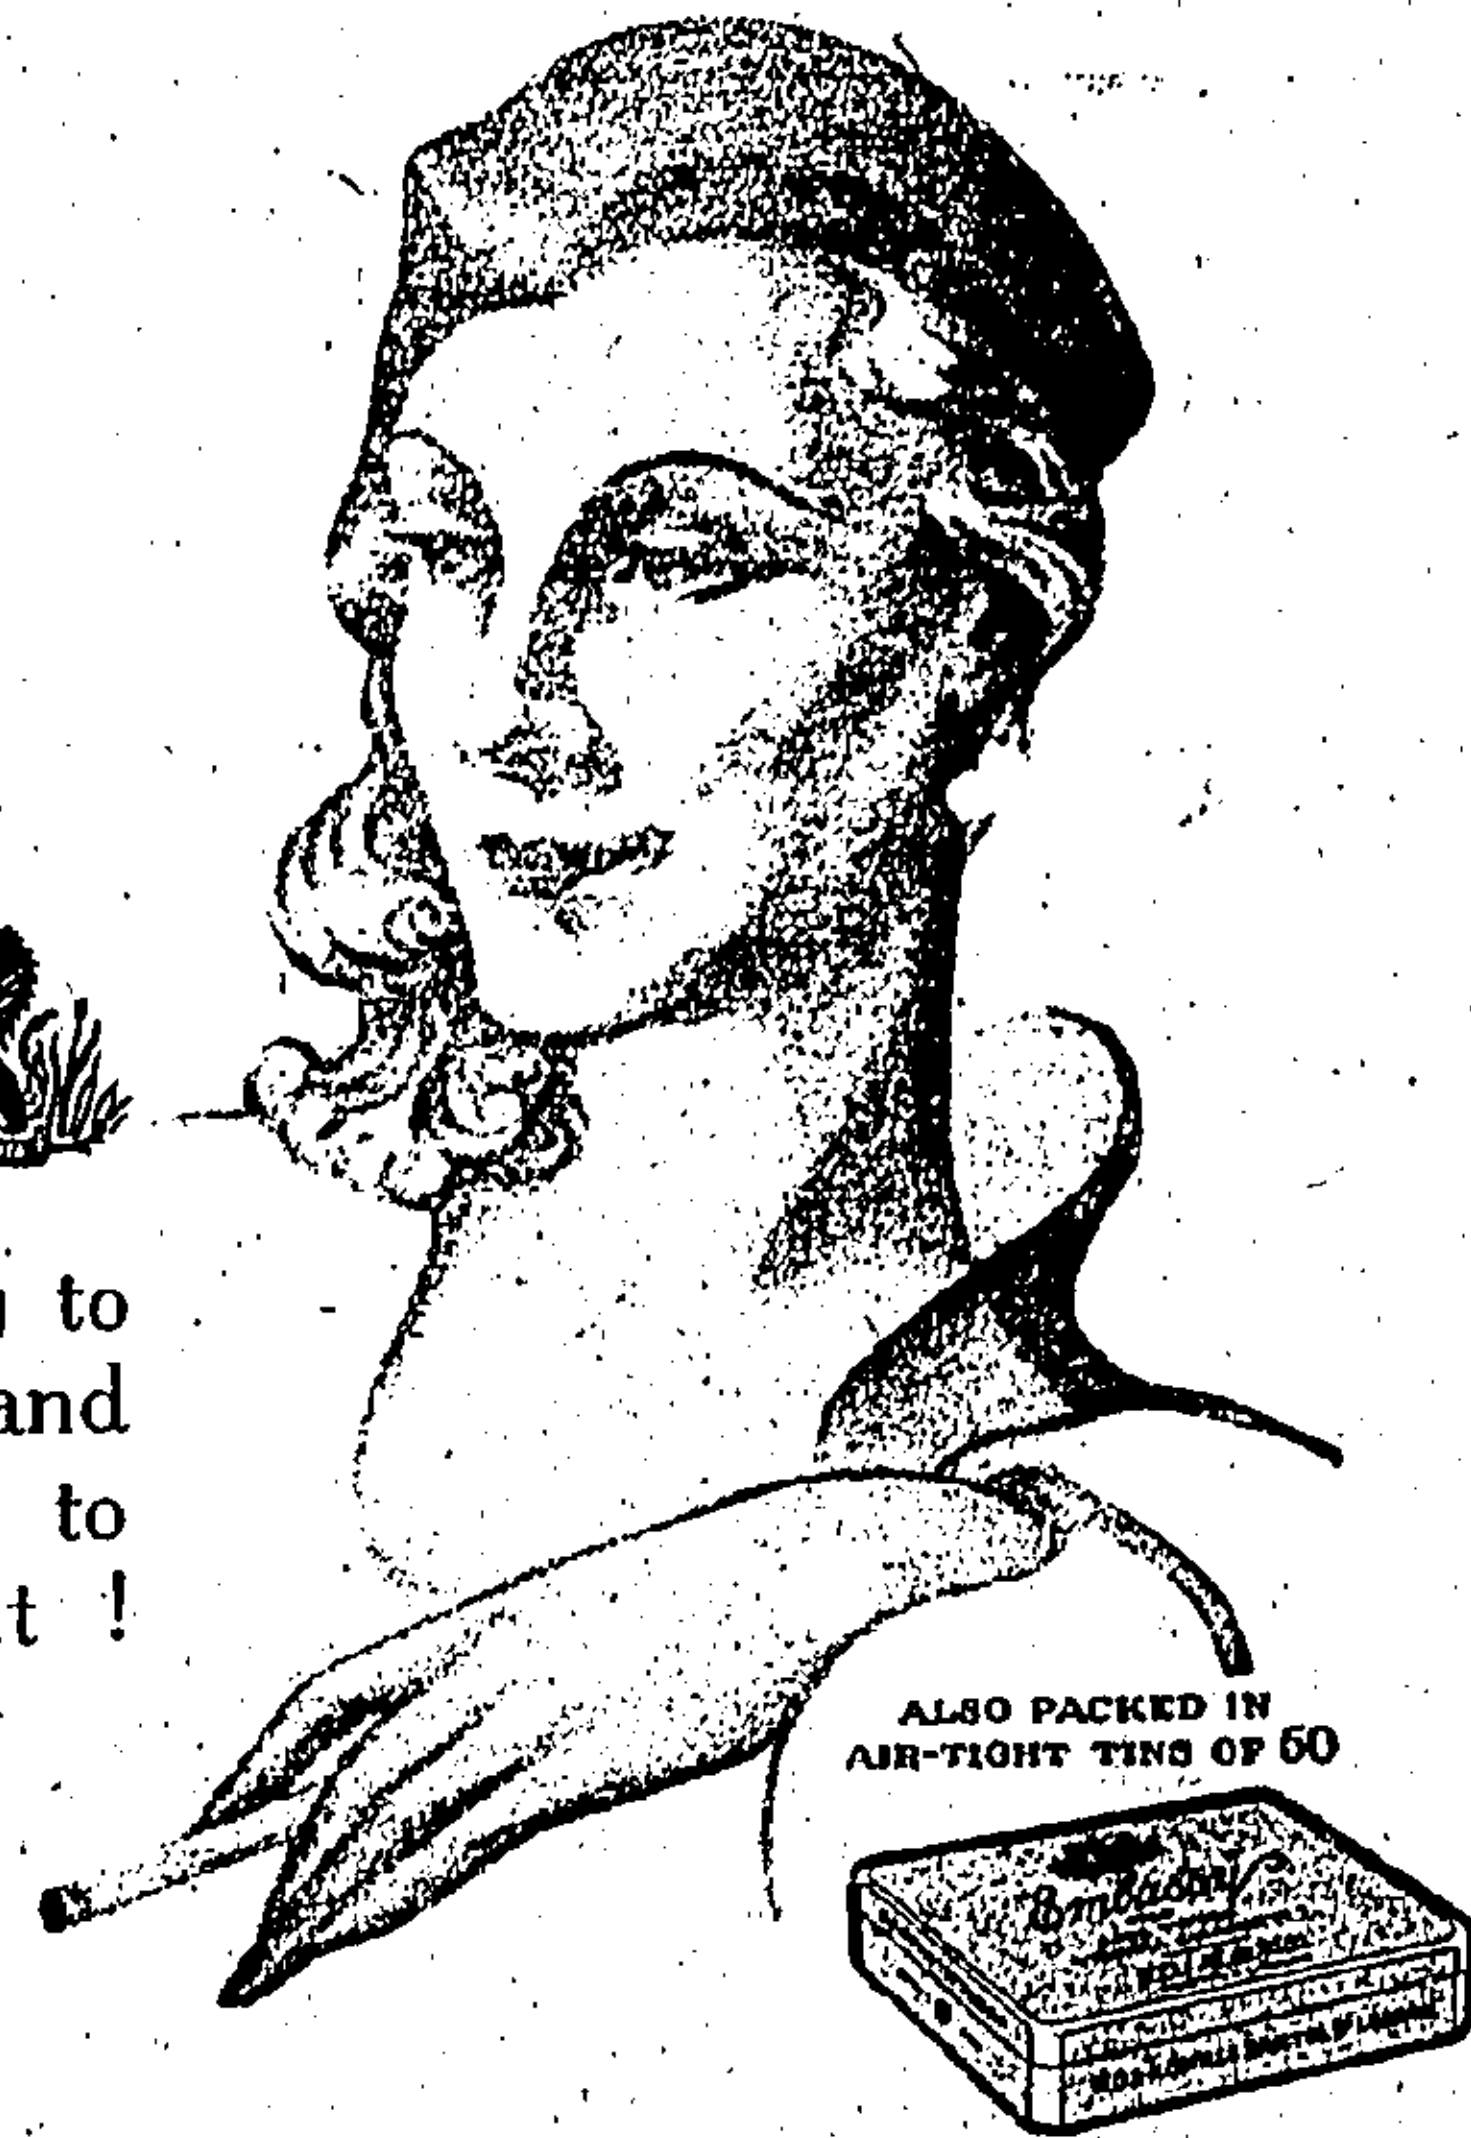

Oliver "Babe" Hardy has always tipped the scales heavily, but what do you think of it, he gained 17 pounds on his European jaunt. And "Babe" swears up and down that the rip was only a lot of hard work.

MAIL REVIEW

"INNOCENTS OF CHICAGO"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Directed by Lupino Lane, who himself was the cause of much laughter in "The Love Parade," the British film-riot "Innocents of Chicago" is the current attraction at the Queen's Theatre. How a beautiful little newspaper reporter is instrumental in saving an ingenious young Briton from death at the hands of Chicago gangsters is hilariously told in this production.

The story commences when Betty Norton is sent to interview Percy Lloyd, a stupid individual, in the guise of Henry Kendall, who comes to Chicago to take over the directorial responsibilities of a milk establishment. He is lured into "taking a ride" with Peg Guinan, who discovers that the milk product is in reality "booze."

How these two innocents escape the gangsters is funnily told in this shrewd satire on Chicago gang warfare.

"CAUGHT PLASTERED"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

That inimitable pair, Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler, who learned that two can be more successful than one, are shown back together again in "Caught Plastered," now showing at the Central Theatre. That it is a farce goes without saying, and of the most idiotic type.

In "Caught Plastered" they are ably assisted by their feminine third to the trio, Dorothy Lee. "I'm That Way About You," is sung by Wheeler and Miss Lee.

Bert Wheeler's perennial sweet-heart, Dorothy Lee, stands for his nonsense again. She started with him in "Rio Rita," and has never kissed another film hero since. Lucy Beaumont and De Witt Jennings are in the supporting cast. Recommended!

MAIL REVIEW

"DEADLOCK"—KING'S THEATRE.

A Butcher's Empire production, directed by George King and introducing a talkie studio as a background, "Deadlock" is now showing at the King's Theatre. The story is straightforward and contains a strong melodramatic plot, written by Charles Bennett.

The films tells the story of a murder committed in a talking picture studio, of which five people are suspected. The shooting takes place whilst the film star, who is the victim of the murder, is actually engaged in acting in a scene before the camera. Mystery enshrouds the affair, and the manner in which the murderer is brought to justice will hold the audience spellbound.

Headed by Steward Rome, Warwick Ward, Majorie Hume and Alma Taylor, the cast also includes Janice Adair, Eamond Knight, Ray Plumb, Cameron Carr, Annette Benson and the talented Japanese actor Kiyoshi Takase.

EMPIRE PAYS HOMAGE TO HER HEROES.

is inevitably a time of discouragement. The frosts of January are cruel things, but for the strong, they tauten the sinews and stir the blood. But if in the winter wheat has been truly sown there will come in due time the season of harvest.

Even after fourteen years and all that has passed, there is still ground for humble confidence, that that sowing in sacrifice and pain will yet quicken and bear fruit, to the bettering of the world.

Herodism Unsurpassed. Despite its horror and its loss, the War was a vindication of the essential greatness of our common nature, for victory was won less by genius in the few than by faithfulness in the many. Every class had its share and the plain man marched to heights of heroism unsurpassed in earlier ages. In this revelation Democracy found its final justification, and Civilisation its truest hope. Mankind can console itself in its hours of depression and failure and steel itself to new labours, with the knowledge that once it had been great.

The sacrifice was chiefly of innocence and youth, and in computing it, there can be no distinction between friend and enemy. That country of the Young knows no frontiers of race or creed. Most men who fell, died for honourable things. Love of country and home, comradeship, loyalty to manly virtues, the indomitable questing of Youth, and to look back upon the gallant procession of those who offered their all, and had the gift accepted, is to know exultation as well as sorrow. Their memory will abide so long as men are found to set honour before ease, and a nation lives not for its ledgers alone, but for some purpose of virtue. They have become, in the fancy of Henry Vaughan, the shining spires of that city to which we travel.

With that supreme thought of their sacrifice, will come the other thought—that of our own responsibility on whom the burden has been laid to carry on the work which they laid down.

What so far have we done?

War Motives Condemned.

During the last fourteen years mankind has condemned the three old motives for war—the desire for wealth, for territorial expansion, and prestige, which have always played such an important part in human history. The same may be said of the more complex if equally old cause—the Balance of Power. Law and public opinion have to-day recognised the equality of all nations whether great or small.

Instead of trying to achieve this balance by a system of alliances or territorial adjustments, it is now guaranteed by a system of mutual arrangements, co-operation and organisation. Thus an ancient tradition has gradually disappeared. All the famous motives for war have become taboo to the nations, to the Governments and all political parties.

Yet why is it, that despite these deep changes in the general mentality, Europe should still be armed to the teeth, and that the menace of War should still be in the air?

Just because as yet we have not brought about the last and the most important change of all in the general mentality, that change without which all earlier changes will be insufficient—we must destroy suspicion and distrust—the constant suspicion between Governments, and the distrust between nations. Again, and again Great Britain has made a gesture. She has reduced her fighting services to less than pre-war numbers, despite the world-wide responsibility of her Colonial dependencies, and the safeguarding of the trade routes on which the very life of the Nation depend. The Royal Navy to-day is but a shadow of that mighty fleet, which during the years of War swept the seas of all enemy shipping.

Arms Essential.

There are to-day those who want total disarmament, entirely forgetting that there must always be some force ready behind law, both amongst nations and within the State, until human nature and so in the minds of men. Surely it is city have reached perfection, and a better way so to write and think that apart from anything else, life and speak of War as it was, that in these outposts of Empire is only peace should never seem too peace-possible, by virtue of the fact that full, and war appear as the grimment they are safeguarded by the armed forces of the Crown. Approximately one-half of the Regular Army and a considerable part of the Navy and Air Force are maintained beyond our shores, and outside Home waters, while the other half of the Army exists to furnish relief. That would have happened if twilight of human destiny.

TO-DAY AT THE CENTRAL THEATRE

there had been no armed forces within recent years in Cyprus, Kashmir, Burma, and Iraq, on the North West Frontier of India, in the Persian Gulf, on the frontiers of the Sudan, and in places where racial animosity is so pronounced? In all those places the presence of a neutral force has been essential, to the preservation of peace and order. I cannot conceive that those men who laid down their lives, would demand as the price of their redemption the total disarmament of those Forces, which to-day are safeguarding the peace of the world.

That wars of aggression and lust for power should be and must be crushed at their very source now and for ever, that is what they demand from us, and what the Two Minutes Silence in their memory demands too.

As the years go by, the observation of this Silence is becoming less of a memorial and more of a period of solemn determination.

The Reminder of War.

It is after all the aggregate of individual opinion that builds up the edifice of all national and political endeavour. It is not in resolutions, and societies, and treaties, that war is first to be abolished, but in the hidden man of the heart. It is he who must seek peace and ensue it. In his daily attitude towards his neighbour, in his daily thoughts, still more in his daily talks about his fellow men of other nations, in his refusal of prejudice about them, in his readiness to think the best of them.

Only when we have killed the lurking demon of unrest and suspicion within our own souls can we hope for the greater Rest, the wider peace, for which the world is waiting.

There are those who say we should forget all about the War, and abolish the pageantry which surrounds the national commemoration, allow it slowly to fade into the past, that the remembrance of War only keeps it alive State, until human nature and so in the minds of men. Surely it is city have reached perfection, and a better way so to write and think that apart from anything else, life and speak of War as it was, that in these outposts of Empire is only peace should never seem too peace-possible, by virtue of the fact that full, and war appear as the grimment they are safeguarded by the armed forces of the Crown. ## The China Mail.

Hong Kong, Friday, Nov. 11, 1932.

Armistice Day.

To-day, as in nearly all parts of the world, Hong Kong observes one of the most significant occasions of the year—Armistice Day. A military parade will be held and special services conducted in the Churches, while fitting tribute is paid by the observance of the annual two minutes' silence. It is held by some that over-much pomp and ceremony is attached to Armistice Day and that the martial displays are inappropriate when peace movements are afoot. But all agree that the memory of the millions who laid down their lives in the greatest war the world has experienced should be honoured, and it is only fitting that the tribute should be an impressive one. The occasion would be justified alone on the ground that it affords a pause for reflection. It is fourteen years since the guns were silenced in Europe and more than a little doubt and bitterness arise when we ask ourselves whether the awful sacrifices in "The War To End War" have been worth while. The noble ideals of the late President Woodrow Wilson and his colleagues at the Versailles Conference have not been fulfilled and the compilers of the Versailles Treaty have been mocked by the events of recent years. Despite the efforts of sincere internationalists and the names of the late M. Aristide Briand and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald instantly occur—national security and guarantee of peace are still as distant as ever, and the war threat looms as prominently as before 1914. Armaments are piling high and the competition for power is unabated. Conferences have failed with monotonous regularity and now the world is on the threshold of a decision which must be made within a few months, and when made, will be fraught with tremendous importance. The forthcoming Disarmament Conference may well be termed the last chance for pacifists as in the event of failure any hopes for agreement will be doomed for at least a decade and the consequences may be disastrous. As the ceremonies proceed to-day statesmen and nations may reflect on the tragic folly of war. If their thoughts influence their policies at the approaching Conference the occasion will have been well worth the observance.

Forthcoming Books.

This is the time of year when book publishers cry their wares loudly and put forth their choicest offerings. From mid-August through November new volumes pour from the presses in a ceaseless stream. This year, though times are hard, the Autumn output is rising again almost to its accustomed level. There are fewer books than last year, but the falling off is not spectacular. It would be surprising if it were, for many of these new books were contracted for when times were better. And, of course, hope springs eternal in the publisher's breast; accustomed to delightful as well as distressing surprises, he can never be sure his ugliest duckling will not turn out a swan. If in quantity the Autumn lists offer no startling change, they do surprise by their quality. Not in several years has a roster so impressive been unrolled. Last year's round-up was trifling by comparison. Judging by those volumes which have already appeared, and the promise contained in the list of those to follow, literature, at least, has not fallen upon evil days. Every season brings its trash, and this one is not without blemish in that respect, but the number of its offerings which command attention is unusual. Partly this is no doubt due to the exercise of more careful choice on the part of the publishers; partly, as always, it is fortuitous. Consider, for example, the new fiction which this season brings. Already there have been published at least half a dozen notable novels. To-morrow comes Mrs. Pearl Buck's sequel to "The Good Earth," and we have recently had the finest work of Ellen Glasgow's long career, a new novel by Mrs. Wharton, a volume of short stories by Willa Cather, new novels by Hugh Walpole and Sigrid Undset, John Galsworthy's new book is soon to come; Elizabeth Madox Roberts, Sherwood Anderson, J. M. Barrie, William Faulkner, Booth Tarkington, Theodore Dreiser, Somerset Maugham—these are but a few of the workers in fiction whose new books will shortly be published. One can only hope that some of the newcomers in the field will prove of equal mettle. In biography, history, science, poetry, public affairs and belles-lettres, the lists are more than usually strong and diversified. Already there have appeared such distinguished books as Ortega's "The Revolt of the Masses," Bernard de Voto's "Mark Twain's America," Claude Bowers's life of Senator Beveridge, the first really satisfying life of Edwin

HERE. THERE and EVERYWHERE.

A Beggar's Ride.

Quite a stir was caused outside the Hong Kong Hotel on Wednesday night when a crippled Chinese mendicant of youthful visage refused to go to the Police Station with a constable. So determined was he that it took three policemen to handle him. A sedan chair was hailed and with much difficulty the Police put him into it. Once seated, the beggar boy became quiet and rode majestically to the Station, a policeman walking by the side of the chair!

Painting The Harbour.

Two European ladies were noticed painting a harbour scene from the unused Section of the Kowloon Ferry Wharf. Such a sight is odd, for, although these are many local artists, few, if any at all, paint from the Ferry wharf, which place commands an excellent view of the harbour.

"Dizzy's" Cabinet Table.

In the Cabinet room of No. 10, Downing-street the Cabinet sit round an oblong table. The Prime Minister usually sits in the middle, with his back to the mantelpiece. The Cabinet did not always sit in this way. I have been shown in a top room of the Junior Carlton Club an enormous round table which was used in the days of the Earl of Beaconsfield for Cabinet discussions.

"Dizzy" always had his own particular ideas on everything, and this table was devised so that at the Cabinet meeting everyone was equal. It was an idea borrowed from the Arthurian legends. The table nowadays is used for special banquets.

According to a scientist, London is the world's noisiest city. He means London.

Facts You Did Not Know.

Collapsible life rafts that can be stowed in streamlined containers have been invented to be carried on seaplanes.

The water used in some Algerian cities is hauled in 18-ton tanks by motor trackers across the North African desert.

There were 722 aeroplanes constructed in the United States in the first six months this year, of which 61 were exported.

To aid natural history students a London museum exhibits mechanically operated skeletons to show how various animals move.

An electric clock invented by a Pittsburgh man tells the time with changing figures for hours and minutes instead of hands.

The Argentine government will enforce a law forbidding the use of weights and measures other than those of the metric system.

Booth, to name but a few. The list of those to come which are strong in promise is too long and too varied to permit of easy selection. The authors and the publishers have done their part. They deserve, and should receive, the public's response.

Democrats To End U.S. "Dry" Laws

Some Amendment Is Believed Certain
NO MORE SALOONS

In spite of "Billy" Sunday, Henry Ford, and all the host which fought liquor and the evils of the saloon, for a time giving the impression of victory—Prohibition is about to be "reformed" in America. Mr. Roosevelt, the new Democrat President, has made a solemn promise.

Modification of the law, now so rigid as to be unwieldy and impossible to administer, is necessary.

Mr. Louis M. Hacker in Current History, a leading magazine of thought in New York, sums up the situation which has led to recent events. He writes:—

"The first real cloud to appear on the horizon, though it was no larger than a man's hand, was the very complete report of President Hoover's Commission on Law Enforcement and Observation. This body, made up of eleven distinguished citizens and headed by George W. Wickersham, had been created on May 20, 1929, to make a general study of the processes and defects of law enforcement; on January 15, 1931, it submitted its findings on Prohibition.

"Not many thoughtful persons who read the entire volume could fail to agree with the bluntly worded conclusion of Commissioner Monte M. Lemann: '... that the Eighteenth Amendment cannot be effectively enforced without the active general support of public opinion and the law enforcement agencies of the States and cities of the nation; that such support does not now exist; and that I cannot find sufficient reason to believe that it can be obtained. I see no alternative but repeal of the amendment.'

"If the effect of the Wickersham Commission report was in itself hardly decisive, other factors were accumulating during 1931-1932 to create a hard, solid body of dissent.

Argument Of Bad Trade.

"First, and most important, was the realisation, that some positive economic act was required to start the wheels of industry going once more. From this sprang the widely expressed belief that the revival of liquor manufacturing under proper restraints would provide the necessary new opportunities for the investment of capital and the employment of labour.

"Second, the necessity for developing new sources of revenue, lest National and State Governments place heavier burdens on the well-to-do, was a consideration of no light weight. Would not, therefore, the re-opening of the old and rich vein of excises furnish a desirable form of relief? It was generally stated that taxes on spirits, wine and beer would alone bring into the Federal coffers fully $1,000,000,000 a year.

Crime A Problem.

"Third, the existence of organised crime had become a national menace. Ending the illicit liquor traffic would not put an end to criminals, but it would drive them into less excusable unsocial activities against which public opinion could more easily be mobilised and a greater effort demanded from police authorities.

"Fourth, politicians of both parties hesitated to stake victory in the forthcoming national election on the single issue of Prohibition. A campaign of generalities, in which both Republicans and Democrats could appeal to the support of all sections and classes without directly alienating one large group, was more in conformity with American political procedure.

"The ensuing action of the two Conventions took the troubled question of Prohibition out of politics. Both promised reform.

Rush Stock Across

London, Yesterday.

Remarkable scenes were witnessed in the northern districts of the Irish Free State yesterday when the Irish farmers strained every effort to remove their cattle over the border into Northern Ireland territory, in the effort to avoid the increased British tariff on Irish products.

Many special trains were chartered, but the railways were quite unable to cope with the enormous quantities of livestock rushed to the Free State railroad. Many cattle failed to cross the border.

CHARITY SHOW AT PENINSULA.

Chinese Performs On Way To America.

At the fancy dress dinner dance at the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday, November 12, in aid of the New Territories Medical Benevolent Society, there is to be another excellent attraction. Paun Yu-jen and the other members of the Joy Fun Toy Company of Chinese jugglers and acrobats, who have enjoyed a sensational success in the various theatres in which they have recently appeared in Hong Kong, will give their farewell performance.

Perhaps it is not generally known that this interesting group of artists are members of one family of which Paun Yu-jen is the eldest son. Their ages range from 18 to 25. They are natives of Peiping, and have been carefully trained from childhood. The company will have concluded a successful season here and are to leave immediately for Shanghai to fulfil theatrical contracts there, subsequently sailing for the United States where they will appear for five months in connection with the Chinese Government's Exhibition at the "Century of Progress" in Chicago.

Empire Pays Homage To Her Heroes!

Agony Of War Recalled In Brief Silence

WORLD WANTS PEACE

An Armistice Day message was delivered in a broadcast speech last night from Z.B.W., by Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan, B.A., senior chaplain to the Forces (Church of England).

Mr. Lewis Bryan said: "At 11 o'clock to-day in every land and on every sea, where there is one member of the British Commonwealth of free peoples, or one outpost of Empire, the Two Minutes Silence will be observed."

The hum of industry, and the throb of machinery will die away, workers in study and shop, and factory, in the open fields, and in the streets of our cities, will cease their labours, to keep again the two most sacred moments, in the history of each of the last 13 years, of the world's life.

In the heart of the Empire, as perhaps nowhere else, is the spirit of these Minutes more fully realised, or so clearly expressed. Well do I remember the scene in Whitehall in 1920. The thronging thousands—the hushed expectancy as Big Ben struck the first note of the Armistice Hour, and the gun boomed out in the quiet air—then human silence, complete and profound. The great concourse of people had been so close, and the breeze over the leaves, on the trees in the street, made the only accompaniment, to the thoughts that flooded through our minds.

When the second signal gun spoke, a curious sound, almost a sigh, seemed to pass over the crowd. Then the drums of the massed Bands rolled and ceased, and trumpeters of the Royal Air Force sounded the "Last Post." A short service followed, the troops were again called to attention, there rang out distinctly the exultant notes of "Reveille," sounded by the buglers of the Royal Marines and the ceremony, so brief and so moving, closed with a verse of the National Anthem.

Dark Memories.

What will our thoughts be to-day, in the silence of those Two Minutes?

Into the minds of some of us there will come the memory of that Hour, on November 11, 1918, when we began to realise, but only dimly, that the four years of agony were at an end, that before us lay the chance of life, the joys of home and kindred—God's clean sunshine and the singing of birds—No more the shadow of long lines of trenches where we had lived like moles, and even the coming of night meant neither ease nor security—of shell holes where we had slept, standing on our feet—of days and nights of dreadful and awful fatigue—of long lines of duckboard tracks, leading back to rest, where one false step in the darkness meant possible death, in the seas of slimy mud.

The Eastern sky painted in scarlet, that rose and fell to the thunder of the guns—the wiring parties and fighting patrols in No Man's Land, the night lit up by the flare of Verey lights, while dark death whispered around.

The memory of churned mud, thrashed by the lightning of bursting shells, of men sobbing out their lives, unheeded and unassured, in the flaming inferno of an enemy's barrage, as the waves swept forward to the attack at Loos and Festubert, at Paschendaele, at Ypres, and Neuve Chapelle, and a thousand places more—of a grey mist creeping across the open where their name was Death, and with it all, the memory of glorious deeds of heroism, unrecorded save in the books of God—the memory of tinkers, tailors, soldiers, sailors, rich men, poor men, gentlemen, thieves who shared with us the good days and bad, and proved themselves the finest comrades in life that any man has ever had.

The Right of Nations.

In all of us, except the very youngest, there will be memories of four years of ceaseless strain—of the daily tidings, that hundreds or thousands of the bravest of our country's manhood, had been wounded or killed, of a cloud huge and hideous, which in spite of the gleams of heroism, forever breaking through, darkened the heavens and the earth.

But the memory which will arise most clear and strong, and in this the very youngest may take their part, for there is no one too young to do them reverence, is the thought of men who died that our country might live, who thought the freedom of one acre of her soil was cheaply bought by the life-blood of the very best of all her sons, who died that the Flag of Liberty might wave untrammelled on land and sea, for the right of smaller nations, to hold up their heads, against tyranny and oppression, who went out to battle for Truth and Honour, for Right and Simple Faith.

For fourteen years and more their bones have mingled with the dust in the stately cemeteries of France and Flanders, across Italy, through Eastern Europe, passing over the sacred Mount of Olives itself, to the farthest shores of the Indian and Pacific Oceans. From Dunkirk to East Africa there is one unbroken line, that is forever England, Clear-cut into the very fabric of the great concourse of people had been so close, and the breeze over the leaves, on the trees in the street, made the only accompaniment, to the thoughts that flooded through our minds.

Age shall not alter them, nor the year's concern.

At the going down of the sun, and in the morning we will remember them.

Problems of Peace.

There followed by years of peace, and Peace hath her problems no less difficult than War, and those who believed that Victory would mean a fresh start, with high hearts and clear eyes, in a new world, were strangely forgetful of the facts of history. The heavy burdens of settlement fell upon shoulders already wearied and bowed. As with the leaders so with the people. They were as bewildered as their masters. After the strain of distant vision, they were apt to seek the immediate advantage. After their toil they claimed the right to apathy. A lurking madness was abroad in the world. The old sanction had lost something of their power. The passions of millions cannot be stirred for four years, without leaving behind a hideous legacy. The crust which we call Civilisation had worn thin, as one pe-war writer declared, and bent it could be heard the muttering of primordial fires.

Peace does not follow naturally on victory. It is itself a construction, a slow and difficult effort to bridge the chasm between two worlds. It

SKY-SCRAPER SEEN AS FIRE MENACE.

No Equipment To Fight Outbreaks.

Commander Sir Sampson Sladen, who was Chief Officer of the London Fire Brigade until shortly after the close of the war, is afraid that higher buildings, in London, which are likely to be sanctioned, will increase the difficulties of dealing with fires.

"While I cannot claim to be in close touch with some aspects of modern construction," Sir Sampson writes in the new issue of "The Parthenon" the Journal of the Incorporated Association of Architect and Surveyors. "I am not aware of any developments which would materially help the Fire Brigade to overcome a fire which had come to a head in a building of the warehouse class, where there can, for all practical purposes, be no restriction on the nature and quantity of inflammable material stored on the upper floors."

My impression is that, given unfavourable conditions, a fire occurring in a perfectly fire-resisting building may, if the outbreak occurs at a considerable height above the street level, prove practically impossible to check until it has burnt itself out, even assuming that the carcass of the building is unaffected by the outbreak."

WAIT

By Hal Pink.

COCKTAIL time on board the liner Monrovia. Laughing, a buzz of talk. Glasses clinking. Strident American accents. The faint ding-ding of a bell below decks. And, running through it all, like the motif through an opera, the soothing duet of throbbing engines and hissing spray, that never ceased by day and night.

The Monrovia, like all Trans-Atlantic liners, was a paradise for the gossip-monger. She was six days from New York, nearing the west coast of Ireland, and everyone on the ship knew that the fair-haired Englishman in the corner of the smoking-room was Alan Ransom, the brilliant young novelist returning home after a tour on American lecture platforms; that his companion, the white-haired old patrician in the wheel-chair, was Sir John Leveson-Dreen, the distinguished scientist who had just been awarded the Nobel prize; and that the ship's doctor, now crossing the room to join them, drank like a fish but was a good fellow withal.

"Evening, Alan. Evening, Sir John. Cocktails." The doctor smiled cheerily. As he beckoned the waiter, the boom of the ship's siren suddenly claimed all sound for its own.

"Fog again?" queried Sir John. "Yessir. Thick fog just come down, sir," interjected the waiter. "Nothing to worry about, sir. Even with fog to slow us down, we ought to make Queenstown tomorrow."

"Well, Alan, my boy," said the doctor, "is it time for that extra-special turn on the radio yet?" Alan laughed. Sir John smiled. "You know, Sir John," went on the doctor, offering cigarettes, "he's been bubbling with excitement all day, itching to hear the golden-voiced announcer say, 'Miss Betty Cavendish will now sing—'"

"Oh, shut up, Doc!" expostulated Alan. "Wouldn't you feel that way if you were me? Think of it! Four months away, chasing all over America in a heat-wave, on a super-torture called a lecture tour, pitching my voice to the clock miles away at the other end of the hall, babbling on platforms about the trend of the modern novel, meeting thousands of people who insist with fiendish friendliness on shaking hands—"

"You've only yourself to blame," said the doctor. "If you will go writing best-sellers—"

News in Brief.

Another delightful band concert is to feature the Peninsula Hotel programme next Sunday night, when interesting orchestral numbers will be presented and also a Violin Solo by Mr. S. Marechek.

For the convenience of residents from the Island who will be attending the Dinner Dance at the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday, November 12, there is to be a Special late ferry leaving Kowloon at 2.15 a.m. (Sunday).

Mrs. Butler, a resident of the Peninsula Hotel, was the victim of a snatch-purse thief in Bowen Road yesterday afternoon. She was walking along a lonely section when a Chinese crept up behind her. He snatched the purse from her hand and ran toward Magazine Gap Road.

Able Seaman William George Bugler, of H.M.S. Keppel, was sentenced to two months' hard labour at the Kowloon Magistracy by Mr. Butters yesterday afternoon, with the hearing of the charge against him of assaulting Mrs. Watts, at the Peninsula Hotel on October 26, was concluded.

Many interesting articles are contained in the Hong Kong University Engineering Journal for October (Volume 4) just published by the University Engineering Society. Of special interest is an article on Pokfulam Survey 1932, by Mr. S. V. Boxer, B.Sc., and another on the subject of Lightning written by Mr. I. Day, A.I.M.E.E.

Club and Borderers Should Win Artillery Favoured For Duel With Police

TSUNG TSIN'S HARD TASK

(By Spot Kick.)

THE Club, after their surprise win over South China last week-end, should prove strong enough for the Navy on Saturday when they will have the advantage of playing on their own ground.

The Navy have the disadvantage of having to reshuffle their team week by week, and as a consequence have few opportunities to work together as a team. Should Rawson be leading the naval attack a different aspect may be the outcome, as he is undoubtedly a leader of great merit. Howe will be out to vindicate his Interport selection and to augment his League goal tally for the season, which, surprising as it may seem, is only two.

Borderers Will Win. Though they defeated the Navy last week to record their second successive win, Kowloon will be unable to stop the Borderers, who enjoyed a field day at the expense of the Recreio last Saturday. A draw against the Athletic and a defeat at the hands of South China have endangered their position at the head of the table, so that they cannot afford to make another slip. Kowloon are, however, developing a strong sense of combination and are by no means as poor a side as their position in the table would suggest, though I cannot see them carrying off the points in the face of an attack such as Jones, Davis and Harris.

The Artillery will enter the field against the Police on Saturday with all confidence, for did they not lower the colours of the Lincolns in their last match? Bryant, Wood and Moore are right on the mark at the moment, and, after conceding six goals to the Athletic on Sunday, the guardians of the law look like having an anxious time. Johnston is in good form at the moment, but he lacks the support essential to success.

Win For Lincolns. Probably the best match in the Second Division will be that between Kowloon and the Lincolns. Like their senior team Kowloon have made great strides, though they cracked up badly against the Artillery to lose by 4 to 2. The Lincolns only drew against Tsung Tsin on Saturday, but there is little doubt that they will leave the field with both points, though a hard fight is in store for them.

The weak sides fielded by the Club recently do not lead to any optimism regarding their chances against Ewo, who are a speedy side of youngsters awaiting their opportunities. A Club revival is due, however, and a win would occasion no surprise.

The Borderers will be defending an 100 per cent. record against Tsung Tsin, who have been encouraged by a creditable draw with the Lincolns. Matthias, Hamblin and Morris will lead the Chinese players a merry dance, and should provide the necessary scoring for the military side's sixth win.

R. A. F. Strengthened. South China are playing the Navy, but though they have the better League record, I favour the chances of the bustling Navy style of play. The Athletic should retain their leadership at the expense of the weak St. Joseph's combination, and the Artillery should encounter little difficulty in beating the present wooden-spoonists.

The Service Corps will have to go all out on Saturday if they are to retain their reputation against the challenge of South China, especially after Sunday's defeat at the hands of the Lincolns. They are a well balanced side and have every chance of carrying off the championship, providing they take no chances against the lower-placed teams.

Another good match should be that between the Borderers and the strengthened R.A.F. team. With the Hermes in port over the week-end I am inclined to favour the chances of the Airmen in spite of the unbeaten record of the Borderers.

Both St. Joseph's and the Athletic, strong contenders for the honours, have easy tasks ahead of them and should garner gift points. The Lincolns should vanquish Taikoo to take third place in the table.

LEE THEATRE COLONY BOXING CENTRE

Financial Loss Of $131.02.

NEW H.K.B.A. OFFICIALS.

The satisfactory financial condition of the Hong Kong Boxing Association, as shown in the annual report and balance sheet, was referred to by Mr. J. Scott Harston, who in his speech, moved their adoption at yesterday's annual meeting, over which he presided.

In moving their adoption, Mr. Scott Harston drew attention to the fact that the tournament account showed a profit of $346.20 and the general account a loss of $477.22, making a net loss of $131.02. The account standing to the credit of the Association with the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation was $1,784.46, and there was a further sum of $300 on deposit with the Colonial Secretary as security for the Entertainment Tax.

A New Arena. "Enquiries have been made as to the possibility of renting some other accommodation for staging future tournaments. The Lee Theatre was available. The theatre, which is situated at the corner of Leighton Hill Road is accessible by bus and tram service, being also close to Happy Valley, which both Service and civilian patrons are accustomed to visit for their sports.

The motion that the report of the general committee and the statement of account for the year ending June 30, 1932, be adopted was seconded and carried unanimously. Prior to the voting for officers for the year, Mr. Scott Harston intimated that he would not seek re-election.

The selection of officers resulted as follows:
Chairman, Mr. R. M. Dyer; Vice-chairman, Mr. G. G. N. Tinson; Official Referee, Mr. A. Murdoch; Manager, Mr. J. Brooks; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. G. S. Hugh-Jones; general committee, Messrs. C. Bond, A. W. Grimmett, W. Ware, Capt. Elliot-Hayward, Capt. R. L. Burnett, Lieut. Comdr. Stephenson, Chief Detective Inspector Reynolds, Major H. R. Shillington and Mr. H. G. Sheldon.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

A nation reflects its characteristics very purely in its attitude towards sport. To the peoples of some countries sport is a minor interlude in the serious business of life; to the peoples of other countries sport is almost the serious business of life itself. Another aspect of the same theme is the fact that certain sports specially appeal to certain nations while other sports remain alien. In spirit to other nations.—Frank Paxon.

ARSENAL SHOULD WIN CUP FINALISTS' GAME AT HIGHBURY

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS AT HOME TO VILLA

WOLVES SHOULD GARNER FIRST AWAY POINTS

WILL SAINTS HOLD STOKE?

BRENTFORD SHOULD RETAIN UNBEATEN RECORD IN FOURTEENTH GAME.

(By Homelander.)

THE clash of last year's Cup finalists will be the feature of the football programme to-morrow. The last time Newcastle were in London they beat the Persians by the only goal scored, but they are attempting a big hurdle in Herbert Chapman's team to-morrow. The Arsenal have yet to wipe out their Cup Final defeat at the hands of the United at Wembley when it will be recalled that Newcastle won by a hotly disputed goal scored by Allen.

The Arsenal's record at Highbury this season is not as good as their away record. West Bromwich having beaten them and Derby County having forced a draw, but all indications point to a London triumph, especially after their overwhelming away win last Saturday over the Wolves. Alex James, David Jack, Joe Hulme and the youthful stars, Coleman and Bastin will prove a little too good for the Tynesiders.

Everton, the League champions, are entertaining the Villa and the game should be one of the best seen during the day. The midlands team were one of the last three unbeaten combinations, and only lowered their colours in a local "derby" against the Albion. Their away record is excellent, only the Albion defeat being credited against them. They have held strong home combinations such as Huddersfield, Liverpool and Sunderland to draw while the scalps of Middlesbrough and Portsmouth hang at their belts.

POMPEY'S CHALLENGE.
The League leaders defeated Newcastle in their away fixture last Saturday and have a splendid home record. Portsmouth being the only team to take a point away from Goodison Park. The Wednesday and Liverpool are among those who have fallen by the wayside against the champions. Dixie Dean will, however, have to be well on the mark if he is to pierce the Villa defence, and the home team will have to hold Brown, Billy Walker and Houghton if they hope to win. It should prove a grand game with the honours even.

Another good game should be that at Hillsborough where the Wednesday will be defending an unbeaten home record against Pompey. Only two teams have been able to divide the spoils when visiting the Wednesday—Blackburn Rovers and Sheffield United—and, though Portsmouth decisively defeated the Albion on Saturday while their hosts to-morrow could only draw at Leicester, there is every prospect of a Sheffield victory. After all the League champions and the Cup holders have been amongst the slain at Hillsborough.

Manchester City are at home to the Wolves, who are seeking their first away points of the season. The midlands team lost badly at home to the Arsenal last Saturday and things do not seem to be going at all right with them this season, but the City have also had their setbacks. Middlesbrough, the Arsenal and Blackburn Rovers have all taken major points away from Maine Road, and there is every possibility of the Wolves doing so to-morrow, especially if Barnecough and Hartill are in scoring mood.

THERE is the possibility of Bradford City creeping up on Stoke City at the head of the Second Division table with the City visiting the strong Southampton team while the Bradford side enjoy a comfortable home fixture against the greatly weakened Burnley side. Stoke have experienced a splendid season to date. Millwall and Bradford are the only teams who have been able to hold the City side in their quest for away points, but in Southampton they will encounter a stiff hurdle. Port Vale have been the only side to rob the Saints of a point, and that was the Southampton side's first home fixture; since then Manchester United and Bury have been beaten among others, and it will come as a surprise if Stoke produce form good enough to take both points, if they capture any points at all.

Bradford City have an undefeated home record, and it is extremely unlikely that Burnley will turn the tables on their opponents. Bury are another unbeaten home combination, and Manchester United will be well satisfied if they secure a division of the spoils.

The Cottagers are entertaining Oldham Athletic, and should be able to hold their unbeaten record, especially after their great display against Plymouth Argyle on Saturday.

The London "derby" between Millwall and Charlton Athletic should abound with thrills with a probable draw as the outcome.

BRENTFORD should retain their unbeaten record against Watford in the Third Division. They have now played 13 matches from which they have secured 24 points, only Bournemouth (home) and Swindon (away) having stood up to them and shared the spoils. Though Watford have visited and beaten both Norwich City and Crystal Palace, I favour the chances of the leaders for whom Robson is displaying amazing form at the moment.

Reading, who are at present second in the table, should prove just strong enough to claim both points from Exeter City, who have been beaten at home by Bournemouth and Brentford. The visitors have lost only one away game—against Bristol Rovers, and after their convincing win on Saturday against Luton, they should keep pace with Brentford at the head of affairs.

Luton Town have an unbeaten home record and their adversaries, Norwich City, will need all their artistry if they are to hold the Town forwards in check. The City have lost only one away game—to Cardiff City, but the ground advantage should turn the scales in Luton's favour.

Clapton Orient should defeat the Rangers in the London "derby," though they will have to keep a weather eye on Brown, who is at the top of his form at the moment, and requires only good support to prove a match-winner.

HULL CITY have a great opportunity to take the lead in the Northern section when they entertain New Brighton to-morrow. Chester, the present leaders are visiting Barnsley, who gained a creditable away win on Saturday. The City are unbeaten to date in their home fixtures while New Brighton have a disappointing away record with two wins over Tranmere Rovers and Carlisle United. It is a very fair outside chance for Hull, though Chester may force a draw at Barnsley. The present leaders have been

BRITISH SOCCER LEAGUE LOOMING ON HORIZON.

Attractive Innovation.

Certain remarks made by Director R. G. Campbell of the Rangers F.C. are being construed to mean that the Ibrox club favour the formation of a British Football League in which clubs in the most populous districts in England and Scotland would take part.

The idea at first glance is very attractive, but it will not come yet awhile. In the first place the clubs that would take part would have to sever their connection with the existing home Leagues and that would be a calamitous happening. Fancy a Scottish League without the Rangers, Celtic, and Hearts, to mention only three of the Scottish clubs which would certainly be invited to join a British League?

The Soccer game is not so healthy as it ought to be, and it is a big question if a League comprising the big clubs is the best way to bring back its old-time grip on the public.

beaten away from home by Manchester Town and York City.

Gateshead are defending an unbeaten record against Southport, and should win fairly comfortably, despite the fact that their opponents are seeking their first away win. Doncaster Rovers will find Accrington Stanley a formidable combination, and though the visitors were beaten at home on Saturday by Hull City they have a very fair chance of securing their second away win of the season. They need the points badly if they are to keep pace with the leaders, and in order to do so they will have to keep a close check on Emery the Rovers' prolific scorer.

EVERYONE would like to know what happened to Aberdeen and the Celtic on Saturday last, both teams being surprisingly defeated in away games against much inferior combinations. In the face of their disappointing displays, however, I favour both teams' chances in to-morrow's games. The brothers O'Donnell and Napier should be able to give the Celtic a win over East Stirling, though the latter have lowered Aberdeen's colours in an away fixture. Moore should lead Aberdeen to victory against Falkirk, who have only two home wins to their credit—against East Stirling and the Hearts.

Queen's Park achieved a good performance on Saturday when they beat Greenock Morton, and their form in home matches leads me to believe that they will hold the greatly improved Hearts team to a draw, though they are capable of winning, as victories over St. Mirren, Cowdenbeath and the Celtic would suggest. Bremner, McKenzie and Paul will need watching closely, but the Hearts have in Smith, White and Walker a match-winning inside trio, and they have also away wins over teams such as Partick Thistle and St. Mirren to their credit.

Only Motherwell and Clyde have left Ibrox Park with a division of the spoils and it is distinctly unlikely that the Morton combination will seriously challenge the supremacy of the Rangers, who are now fighting desperately hard to regain the leadership of the premier Scottish League.

WAIT.

Alan reappeared.
"Here you are!"
He tied the life jacket about Sir John's shoulders, draped a heavy camel-hair coat round him, tossed the doctor his coat and jacket, and donned his own last.
All was clamour and confusion. Fog shrouded everything. From a steward they learned that another boat had crashed their bows in, and that the Monrovia was sinking by the head.
"Women and children first!" Ship's officers lined the rails, calming the passengers as best they could, waiting for the first boats to be lowered from the deck above. Sir John saw the purser and called to him:
"Will you be able to take them all, purser?"
"I don't know yet, Sir John," was the reply. "We're heavily laden this trip. All these Italians returning home, you know. But here's the first boat and we'll put you in right away."
"No! No!" protested Sir John. "Women and children first. Let me take my chance with the men."
"Women can swim," broke in the doctor bluntly, "but you can't. Give a hand here, you men."
Willing hands grasped the chair and wheeled it over to the gap in the rail as the first boat swung down on its block and tackle-gear and bumped level with the deck.
Sir John caught Alan by the arm and whispered hoarsely:
"Alan, I'm an old man, with nothing much left to live for. If they'll let me, will you take my place in the boat? You are young—life's just beginning for you—your career—and Betty—"
"Thank you, Sir John—but I can't."
"Now, Alan—"
"It's no use, sir," said Alan firmly. "It's grand of you to offer. I'll never forget it. But I couldn't do it." He tried to laugh. "I'll be all right. When the boats are full we'll launch rafts."
"Good-bye, then—and good luck!"
"Good-bye!"
Sir John was lifted from the chair by a burly officer and seated safely in the boat. Alan and the doctor backed away as women and children surged up to the rail. It was a night-mare scene, that boat-loading in the misty darkness. Women clung to men and refused to be parted, only to be drawn away to the boats by others more sensible than themselves, children whimpered, men shouted hoarse admonition to families.
Five boats were filled and successfully lowered. Most of the men were stoically waiting their turn. Suddenly the ship began to tilt at an alarming angle. The last batch of women, children and old people were still clambering over the side when panic seized a number of the foreign passengers, and a surging mob of wild-eyed men knocked aside the officers and rushed the boats.
"Stand back!"
Shadows merged in mad confusion.
"Back, I say—women and children first!" roared the voice of authority. A revolver cracked viciously. The officer in charge was shooting to hold back the mob of men.
The rioters fell back and Alan was knocked off his feet in the rush and fell beneath the heels of the shouting men.

The doctor dived after him in mad rage.
"Get out of the way! There's a man down here. Where is he? My God!"
Alan lay on the deck limp and insensible, a curiously twisted heap. Blood streamed from a cut on his head. The doctor made a swift examination and called for a stretcher.
Stewards came running. They lifted the boyish figure and placed a life-jacket as pillow under his head. After a few minutes, Alan opened his eyes and gave a moan of pain.
"My—back," whispered Alan. "It hurts—terribly."
The purser knelt by the doctor's side. "Is he badly hurt?"
"Spine broken, I'm afraid," murmured the doctor softly. "Can't do much. Send for my medicine case, will you?"
"Doctor," gasped Alan, faintly. "I remember now—the collision—did Sir John get away—safely?"
"Yes, we got him off all right. Much pain?"
"It's damnable—is it bad, doc?"
"Here's something coming to ease it," replied the doctor, as a steward appeared with his case. He administered morphia.
Then came the shout:
"Every man for himself!"
The doctor, kneeling by the stretcher, saw the last boat launched; saw the rafts and hatch-covers go overboard, men clinging to them like flies. Faint cries and hails came from those out in the mist, tossing on the waste of waters.
Men still thronged the decks. There were neither boats nor rafts for them. They were doomed.
"Doctor," said Alan. "Are you still there?"
"Yes, Alan."
"You should have gone with the others," said the boy quietly. "The pain's a bit easier now. . . . I suppose there's no hope for us. . . . But doc, there's one thing you might do for me . . . if you will . . ."
"What is it?"
"Betty," breathed Alan. "Oh! the pain . . . I . . . she should be singing on the radio now . . . if I could hear her . . . before it's too late."
The doctor stumbled down the sloping deck and called for help. Two oilers from the engine room helped him to carry the stretcher into the smoking room.
The radio was still working. It had its separate batteries, and did not work off the ship's current.
The smoking-room was crowded. Oilers, stewards, deck-hands, officers and thirty or so male passengers. A Cockney steward behind the bar was dispensing drinks lavishly.
Some were laughing. Some sat with their heads in their hands. Some were already drunk—it was the easiest way out. The lights of the storm-lanterns flickered fitfully upon the scene.
The doctor turned the volume control of the radio to full strength. The dance band blared out.
"That's right—let's 'ave a bit o' music!" yelled the Cockney steward.
Alan was murmuring, delirious. The doctor knelt, listening. "Sing . . . Bet . . . Alan was saying, 'the song I first heard . . . that December day . . . you were sitting at the piano in the firelight . . . singing . . . Hello, Dad . . . no, it's all right, Mother . . . play up, School . . .'
The band finished its number with a crash of cymbals.
The voice of the announcer: "Miss Betty Cavendish is going to sing to us a group of songs. The first—'Wait.'"
Alan lifted his head in a moment of consciousness. "Louder," he called. " . . . can't you get it louder?"
Then a high soprano voice rang clear:
Wait for me, dear, if you pass the way
Of the sunset fields when the hour is late,
There in the hush of the dying day,
Dearest, wait!
Wait while the wind whispers dreamy words,
And the stars of heaven are compassionate,
When slumber comes to the nesting birds,
Dearest, wait!
Gradually a hush had fallen upon the room. The doomed men listened, silent, thoughtful. Alan cried again:
"Betty . . . I'll wait . . . where

know whether the Government intended to adopt the Report as the basis of their policy.

Must Hear Japan.

Sir John Simon replied it would be difficult to praise the Lytton Report too highly. The Report was written with most striking moderation and a real sense of sympathy, true statesmanship, a real sense of perspective. He emphasised the Report's anxiety to present the case fairly from both sides. The Report was more significant because thebesides being unanimous it was signed by representatives of five nations, including the United States. He added it was not fair or right after a promise had been given to listen to the observations of Japan, to pronounce judgment before hearing them. He recalled that Mr. de Valera was acting with complete impartiality in deciding the League Council should meet on November 21 after these documents had been studied.

Sir John Simon declared he was determined not to pass judgment until he had heard Japan's observations. The Government would continue loyally to co-operate with the League but no good could be done by individual or preliminary declarations, which would only prejudice the matter if the Government meant to act for the League as a whole. They had a further ground for satisfaction (though the situation was anxious) because they had been able to act in closest co-operation and good-feeling with the United States.

Cherished Friendship.

Sir Austen Chamberlain felt nothing but friendly feelings for Japan. He cherished, he said, the memory of an old alliance. He was one of the dwindling band who, at a critical moment in Japan's history, approved in the Cabinet the Anglo-Japanese Treaty. He now appealed to Japanese statesmen to fairly and candidly consider the Lytton Report and make it possible for the old friends to maintain their old admiration for the island race.

Mr. George Lansbury, winding up for the Opposition, referred to Manchuria and Sir John Simon's suggestions for another European Peace Pact. He said treaties of non-aggression already existed. The Kellogg Pact and League Covenant were there. But what was the use of signing treaties, he asked, if they were of no avail. He instanced the Nine Powers, including Japan, who signed the Washington Pact, guaranteeing China's territorial integrity. That Pact had been broken and nothing had been done beyond making wordy protests.

TRIBUTE PAID TO WAR DEAD AT CENOTAPH.

the Royal Artillery, the Royal Engineers, the Royal Army Medical Corps, the Royal Army Service Corps, and the Royal Army Ordnance Corps.

Facing the Cenotaph from the Hong Kong Club were the Company from the Lincolns, with the buglers.

A detachment representing the Royal Navy formed a third side of the square. The fourth side of the square was the bank of floral wreaths.

Members of the Legislative Council and the various Government officials stood on the step of the Hong Kong Club.

Among the representatives gathered at the Cenotaph were detachments from the foreign naval vessels in Harbour.

A body of 32 men from the Portuguese cruiser Adamastor, and contingents of 12 men from each of the American warships, U.S.S. Fulton and U.S.S. Mindanao, paraded.
